INJURIOUS PERFUMES.

Odors of Certain Flowers Exert Disastrous Influence on Voice and Eyes.

The prevalence of eye troubles among those who handle hyacinths in the great Harlem nurseries is no new thing, but the exact cause has been a mystery. The disease is commonest in the autumn, says the New York Journal.

The symptoms are great irritability of the eyes, eye catarrh and intense itching.

A New York physician has been examining the pollen of hyacinths and has found abundant cause for trouble. It is full of living mites and maggots and sharp needle-like crystals of oxalate of lime. It is not yet certain whether the inflammation of the eyes is caused by the organic or the inorganic constituents of the dust.

Certain other flowers exert a disastrous influence on the voice. The French physician Cabanes gives some interesting examples of this.

"At a soiree in Paris," he says, "the celebrated singer Marie Sasse was presented with a large bouquet of Parma violets which had been sprinkled with a concentrated extract of the same flower. She was very fond of violets and inhaled the perfume eagerly.

"Presently she attempted to sing, and found that her voice was entirely gone. Her vocal cords were, for the time being, completely paralyzed."

Many singers regard not only violets, but also mimosa, hyacinths and tuberoses as highly dangerous, producing lasting hoarseness and even complete loss of voice. Mme. Richard observed that pupils who came to her classes wearing violets were not in good voice, and on examination she found their vocal cords swollen and sealy.

Mme. Krauss also found that violets sometimes caused hoarseness almost instantly.

Christine Nilsson tells of an artist who sang in a room the air of which was saturated with the odor of roses and tuberoses. After the performance he felt pains in the throat, and within a few months his voice was entirely gone. After this Nilsson would tolerate no flowers in her apartments. Mme. Isaac and Emma Calve consider elder flowers very injurious to the voice.

Singers of nervous temperament are more affected by flowers than are those of a more phlegmatic type.

ART STUDENTS OF NEW YORK.

They Live Sane, Healthful Lives, Unlike That of the Same Class in Paris.

The art schools of New York and the life of the students in them is handled in an interesting manner in the Woman's Home Companion in an article entitled "The Girls' Art Schools of New York." As to how the young women students live the author writes as follows:

"There is no absurd dressing among the art students in New York—at least not after they have attended the classes for a day or two; and the popular notion that all art students live in filthy, barren garrets, cook their own meals by means of their oil lamps, and live generally upon the outer ragged edges has no ground in fact, so far as the students in New York are concerned. There are some such cases, but they are extremely rare. In the great majority of cases the students, if they cannot afford to pay for the necessities from their own pocketbook, stay away from the city until they can borrow sufficient funds. Many girls with thin purses attend only half-day classes, and work at some commercial occupation the rest of the day. I know of several girls who do enough typewriting in the mornings to pay for their afternoon art lessons and their board besides, while numbers of students work for a salary in the daytime and attend classes at night only.

"The art students of New York do not seek living places in any one particular part of the town, as do the students of Paris. The various art schools are in widely separated sections of the city, and as living near to their schools means so much saved in car fare, the girls usually live within easy walking distance of their respective class rooms. Possibly 95 per cent. of the students board with private families or live in ordinary boarding houses, where they can secure fair board and room as low as four dollars a week; but seven dollars a week is the average amount charged. The other five per cent. of the students rent studios of their own, or more often meagerly furnished bedrooms, and take their meals in restaurants; or else three to a dozen of them club together, rent a flat, and hire a servant to cook their meals."

Japanese Brides.

The Japanese bride, dressed in a long white silk kimono and white veil, sits upon the floor facing her future husband. Two tables stand near, and upon one are two cups, a bottle of sake and a kettle with two spouts. Upon the other side a miniature plum tree, typifying the beauty of the bride; a miniature fir tree, which signifies the strength of the bridegroom; and a stork standing upon a tortoise, representing long life and happiness. The two-spouted kettle is put to the mouth of the bride and bridegroom alternately, signifying that they are to share each other's joys and sorrows. The bride keeps her veil and it is used as a shroud when she dies. —Chicago Chronicle.

Lines and Wrinkles.

Wife—Isn't that another new wrinkle in your face, dear?
Husband—Very likely. I received a line from your dressmaker to-day. —Chicago Evening News.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

"Does this climate agree with you?" "Yes," answered the weather prophet. "It agrees with me, but not with my predictions." —Washington Star.

Funnybiz—"Biffer is a fugitive from justice." Ezzy—"No!" Funnybiz—"Yes—the gas collector's been after him for two weeks." —Ohio State Journal.

Photographer—"Now, please look pleasant." The Artist—"Sorry, but it is impossible for me to look like anything but a genius." —Meggendorfer's Blatier.

An Irish lecturer, upon being introduced to his audience, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, before I begin to speak I wish to say a few words." —Chicago Daily News.

"Garn!" yelled Sammy to Bill Bruiser. "Yer frightened ter hit the Paradise Alley champion!" "No, I ain't!" retorted the Bruiser. "I'm frightened ter kill 'im!" —Boston Globe.

No Harm in That—"I suppose there is lots of gossip at your boarding house. What do you mostly talk about?" "Well, we usually talk about the dining-room table." —Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Do you know a fine distinction when you see it?" asked the chronic joker. "Perhaps. What is it?" "I heard a sound at my shutters the other night, and what do you think it was?" "A robber?" "No; rubber." —Indianapolis News.

His Aunt (horrorified)—"I wouldn't smoke a nasty cigar like that if I were a little boy like you, Bobby!" Bobby (complacently)—"You're right, you wouldn't! There ain't a kid in my gang that can smoke one of this brand without being laid up!" —Brooklyn Eagle.

HEIGHT ADDED ON THE HEELS.

One Way of Helping Those Who Think Nature Has Made Them Too Short.

A young man with two very bad feet went into the shop of an orthopedic shoemaker the other day to see if he couldn't get something in the way of footwear that he could put on his feet without suffering pain. After attending to his own needs, he began a scrutiny of the things in the shop and concluded that there were a good many people in this world who were worse off than he. Among other remarkable-looking shoes was a pair with tremendously high heels. The heels were not French-shaped, tapering to a point, but solid and substantial like those of ordinary walking shoes, except for their excessive height. That part of the shoe which comes up around the Achilles tendon was also of great height and gave the shoe as it sat on the floor a most peculiar appearance. The young man asked what was the matter with the unfortunate who had to wear such shoes, says the New York Sun.

"He wants to get a job in the post office," said the shoemaker. "He is too short by nature and he wants me to make him longer without anyone's being the wiser. Those shoes look strange now, but as soon as their owner gets them on his feet they will look all right and you could not tell, unless you examined him closely, that he was standing fully two inches on the ground. Most of the height is added inside the shoe. It seems that in order to get this job he has to be two inches higher than he really is. He is naturally very short. He came to me and asked me if I could help him out. I told him I could if he had the money to pay me. You know, skill in shoemaking costs like skill in any other line of business. I told him that for $35 I could fix him up. Now he will be all right if they only measure him with his shoes on. If they don't, he's out $35.

"I do a good deal of that sort of business. There are a lot of people who are very sensitive about their lack of height. This is especially true of little men, but there are some women who want to look stately and they do so by having their shoes built up inside. They are good customers. Vain men and women always are, for they are willing to pay any price to satisfy their vanity. The trick is rather a difficult one to do so that it is not noticeable. It is harder for men than for women, because there are no skirts to help to conceal any outward peculiarities. The average shoemaker has trouble in accomplishing the end desired, and so they come to me and pay fancy prices, because they know that I make all sorts of peculiar things that are called shoes. If they are willing to pay the money, I suppose I ought to be glad of it, instead of moralizing upon it, as it is part of my bread and butter."

Wives Must Have Good Teeth.

Good teeth are one of the prime requisites of an Eskimo wife. She must be able to do the cooking, and to sew, and to chew hides. Furs are the only possible dress. Once dry, they are as stiff as boards, and before they can be made into garments the fibers must be broken. Accordingly, the women bend the hide double, making a crease through its length. Beginning then at one end they chew steadily to the other. Then, creasing the hide a little farther on, they chew again and repeat the simple process until every inch of the surface has been chewed, and, with the fiber broken, the skin is flexible. —N. Y. Herald.

Likely.

Guide (referring to Egyptian Pyramids)—It took hundreds of years to build them.
O'Brien (the wealthy contractor)—Thin it wor a gover'mint job, eh? —N. Y. World.

Folly Always Peeps Out.

If a man have folly in his sleeve it is sure to peep out. —Danish Proverb.

ATCHISON

And Rock Island Stocks' Movements Were Most Conspicuous.

By Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—The stock market, under the influence of the news of the purchase of control of the Southern Pacific by a syndicate in the interests of the Union Pacific, showed a large and excited demand for stocks at the opening today. As a result of an accumulation of buying orders in commission offices since last Friday, there were wide openings in the various stocks under the excited bidding of competing brokers. They bought 12,500 shares of Union Pacific upon the fall of the hammer at simultaneous prices of 88 1/2 to 89 1/4, compared with 87 1/2 on Friday night.

The opening price in Southern Pacific was highest, that stock selling at both 47 1/2 and 47 on a transfer of 8000 shares. The demand came from London, and the opening price here is considerably below the parity of that established in London this morning.

Professional speculators took an active part in the market with the advantage offered of a large outside demand for stocks attracted by the Southern Pacific deal. In their manipulation to advance prices, one operator made a demonstration bid for 10,000 shares of Union Pacific at 90. It was quickly supplied and as a consequence Union Pacific ruled below that for the rest of the day. The completion of the Southern Pacific transaction caused additional credence to rumors of other similar transactions. It is highly probable also that the likelihood of further transactions is increased by the fruition of this plan.

There was a large demand for Atchison and for Rock Island attracted by this probability. The movement in these two stocks was, on the whole, the most conspicuous of the day. The advance in Atchison reached 3 1/2 points and in Rock Island 2 1/2 points on very large dealings. The rise in the railroad list, which was very general in sympathy with these movements, invited heavy realizing, and the bull speculators turned their attention to other points of the list to sustain the market. The conspicuous result of this operation was shown in the local tracks, Brooklyn Transit and Manhattan rising 3 1/2 points each and Metropolitan 2 1/2.

There was a period of activity and strength in the steel stocks which lifted them from 1 to 3 1/2 points. The whole market was inclined to run off in the late dealings on realizing, and closing rather easy.

The railroad bond market was strong and slightly more active.

United States bonds are all unchanged.

A Standard Oil Man Gives His Opinion of It.

By Associated Press.
Lima, O., Feb. 4.—C. F. Lufkin, one of the Standard Oil Co.'s confidential men, returned today from Beaumont, Texas, and denies that the Standard Oil Co. has purchased the immense amount of land accredited to them. He says that tests show that the oil can not be refined and that it contains only a slight per cent. of illuminating oil. He says it is fit only for fuel, but that freight rates are so high that it will never come into competition, even for that, with Lima or Pennsylvania oil.
